

The Friends of the South End Library [FOSEL] will be collaborating with the Boston Public Library [BPL] and the City of Boston to reinvent the South End library with you, the South End Community.

A great example of the rebirth of today's public libraries can be found right here in Boston with the award-winning renovation of our own Central Library's 1972 Phillip Johnson Building on Boylston Street.

A number of the BPL's 24 branches have undergone similar transformations; others are awaiting their re-openings this year and yet others are scheduled to begin renovations in the next five-ten years, including the South End branch library.

The Boston Public Library's mission is to preserve and provide access to historical records of our society, and to serve the cultural, educational and informational needs of the city and the Commonwealth.

- Facilitate sustainable funding growth
- Systemwide improvements, acquisitions, and access supporting the community's needs
- Enhance services systemwide with special emphasis on youth services
- Develop and implement a digital, technological and innovation plan
- Improve and enhance the staff and organizational culture a focus on support, engagement, productivity and customer service
- Be ready for the unexpected

FOSEL has formed a Planning Committee of Board volunteers to gather information about what the South End library renovation might entail. We have visited a number of newly completed libraries in Boston and elsewhere, talked with their library staff and Friends groups.

The Planning Process is sponsored by the BPL and the City's Public Facilities Department and begins with a Programming Study, funded in the FY 2020 budget. The first step is a public information meeting sponsored by the BPL with South End residents.

The Public Library is much more than a building, it is a symbol of our values and holds the stories found in our communities. Boston is a city of diverse neighborhoods and for over a century our Public Branch Libraries tell the stories of those individual communities.
